CHARGE IS DISMISSED—On grounds of insufficient evidence, a charge of assault with a deadly weapon against Alvino Patia yesterday was dismissed by Justice McKee. The complaint was made by Cimon Hernandez, who alleged Patia had thrust a revolver against his stomach. Joe Garcia, a witness to the affair, testified that he saw Patia with the gun. He said he saw the gun, but Patia said he had a small tin toy revolver.

BOTH INJURED IN FIGHT—A charge of aggravated assault against Antonio Salvador yesterday was dismissed by Justice McKee. The complaining witness was Pedro Rodriguez, who alleged Salvador struck him over the head with a stick which he was collecting wages from him for picking cotton for Salvador. Salvador said Rodriguez had cut him on the leg with a knife before he struck him. The weapon he used was a stick, he said, and not a real gun. Rodriguez denied he had cut Salvador. The affair occurred last Saturday on a ranch east of Phoenix on the Tempe road. While Rodriguez was receiving medical attention at the city jail shortly after the affair, the cut in Salvador's leg was being treated at the sheriff's office.

FINED FOR ASSAULT—J. W. Turner yesterday was found guilty of assault and was fined $25. The charge was made by a woman, who alleged he entered into a contract in October, 1919, with the packing company to become working superintendent of their plant for two years at $5000 a year. A stipulation was added to the contract, he says, by which the packing company agreed to pay him his salary for six months should they discharge him. He was discharged, he said, and the company discharged him without consent and have since refused to abide by the contract.

FREED OF BAD CHECK CHARGE—A charge of bad check property by means of a bogus check against John Williamson of Tucson was dismissed yesterday by Justice McKee. The complaint was made by Cal Messner, who alleged Williamson had given him a check for $1000 as part payment for a truck valued at $7500. The check was returned, Messner alleged, by a Tucson bank marked "no account." Williamson said at the time he wrote the check his partner in Tucson had arranged with the bank to honor the check. He learned the bank had declined the check, he said, about two weeks after the purchase, when he was returning the truck to Messner.

COTTONGROWERS APPEAR OPPOSED TO GIN CONTROL

But Sentiment At Meeting Changes So Often That It Is Hard To Determine Real Attitude

Salt River valley cotton growers do not favor legislation of gins as public utilities nor their control by the state corporation commission. That, in brief, was the expression of a public meeting for growers, held at the chamber of commerce last night. The meeting was called by the Arizona American-Egyptian Cotton Growers' association to determine the position of growers relative to the bill recently introduced in the house of representatives to regulate gins and allied industries, including oil mills.

Although voting, 7 to 4, in favor of supporting a bill that would regulate cotton gins, excluding all sections pertaining to cotton oil or by-products, W. S. Stevens, chairman, held that the meeting was opposed to such legislation. He held this view, he said, because less than 20 per cent of those present voted on the motion, the great majority seemingly being unable to determine their position.

Earlier in the evening, the meeting had voted 7 to 6 in favor of legislation that would govern all phases of the ginning industry, including oil mills and allied industries. But in a general discussion that followed, sentiment swayed back and forth, until the chair finally entertained a motion for adjournment about 11 o'clock. Probably 75 growers attended the meeting, while practically all of the leading ginners of the valley were represented.

HEAR PROPOSED LEGISLATION
Proposed legislation under consideration was a draft prepared by the Arizona American-Egyptian Cotton Growers' association, at the request of many of its members, supplemented by experts from a bill suggested by Governor Thomas B. Campbell. It was intended to initiate this measure in the house as a substitute for the Neill T. Bush bill.

The draft provides for the grading, weighing and sampling of cotton in addition to the control of gins, mills and allied industries by the corporation commission.

It was evident from the outset that the growers were undetermined as to the proper stand on the subject matter. A majority, it developed in the discussion following, opposed present ginning conditions because of costs but they were not prepared to go on record as favoring legislation that would control the industry, as the best means of solving the problem. Many favored a co-operative scheme whereby the farmers themselves would own and operate the gins, but it was recognized that such a step would be impossible at this time in view of financial conditions.

The position of the ginner was fully set forth in talks by Guy P. Nevitt, representing the Southwest Cotton company, H. B. Atha of the Arizona-Egyptian Cotton company, and Mr. Madden, representing the Dunlop Tire company.

"I am not so sure that cotton gins would not be better off under a public utilities act than under present conditions," Mr. Nevitt declared in opening, "but not the oil mills."

"I have heard a great deal here tonight about how much the ginners have been making from the growers. My opinion is that the growers of this valley have no reason in the world to kick."

wants to encourage the cotton industry in this valley. It has loaned you its money at 6 per cent, at first, then 10 per cent, and later 8 per cent, to help you get started. And then this company put in gins, that your cotton might properly be taken care of. The company ginned your cotton and you paid the ginning charges when you got ready. And later, when you were unable to harvest your crops because of the labor shortage, this company brought in the needed labor, that you might be saved.

"Yet you talk about being robbed by the ginners. I dare say that nearly every ginning company in the valley would willingly turn the gins over to the growers—glad to be rid of them. They would probably even help the growers in the purchase of these gins, just to get them off their hands," he concluded.

Mr. Atha stated that the company he represents has loaned more than $500,000 to the farmers of the valley, while other ginners stated that much was being done to carry the grower over to a more prosperous period.
